

SPRING FASHION EXTRAVAGANZA PRESENTED BY THE BROWNSTONE IN HARLEM

New York's award winning designers and entrepreneurs set the runway on fire this Spring. Princess Jenkins, owner of Harlem's Lifestyle Shop, "The Brownstone", Imani Jewelry, Harriet Rosebud, Denise Goring, and Adrienne Lockett held a dynamic fashion event earlier this month. These African American women have combined experiences of over 150 years in the business of dressing, styling and enhancing modern women.

The Spring fashion extravaganza included a runway show, artist 'meet and greet,' power shopping and a scrumptious brunch provided by JRose catering. The day began at noon with pre-show shopping inside The Brownstone with each designer showcasing their Spring 2010 collection.

At 3:00pm the runway came alive with vivid colors. Rosebud N.Y. wowed us with her fabulous spring hats. Imani Jewelry broke out the lime, yellow, red and tangerine leather neckpieces and asymmetrical earrings. Denise Goring hand paints luscious Afro-centric expressionism on her wearable art designs introduced pastel silk Dupioni with Chiffon, Adrienne Lockett fascinates us with the ancient opulence of her beaded jewelry and original sterling silver and brass designs and The Brownstone introduced colorful linen suiting with intricate embroidered details.

The Brownstone is Harlem's flagship location for designers, making it a total shopping experience that clients rave about. Owner Princess Jenkins said, "I have over two decades of experience dressing women for the important moments in their lives and I treat each and every client special because I love what I do and want women to look and feel their very best."

This Harlem event allowed the participants to experience the beauty, creativity and success of award winning African American women in business.
